What's New in the TracePlus Winsock?

A powerful and accurate application-level performance and diagnostic tool for Win32. TracePlus (TCP/IP for Windows) is a full-featured Winsock spy that displays Winsock API calls (including socket creation, sending, and receiving) in real-time, intercepting all Winsock socket communication. It shows exactly which Winsock API call is being used, and when each call is made. And it makes it possible to determine whether a Winsock function call was successful, and to examine Winsock error codes. With TracePlus you can: View the Winsock protocol implementation of web and email servers Identify Winsock functions being used in a source-level debugging environment Reverse engineer and understand a TCP/IP application's Winsock and Internet protocol implementation Identify Winsock function usage in a TCP/IP application by watching its Winsock API calls in real-time Analyze Winsock and TCP/IP connections Determine whether TCP/IP is being used as part of a WCF (Web Services Conversation) call Detect Winsock calls made by a TCP/IP application, which were not included in its client and server prototypes Detect whether an application is in a client or server mode Use TracePlus to reverse engineer other Winsock applications without source code, interpret conversations between two Winsock applications, and view each Winsock application's internal protocol implementation. Identify and trace Winsock and TCP/IP API calls in a process Determine which Winsock function call was used to create a TCP/IP socket Verify whether an Internet TCP connection is secure Detect WebSocket (RFC 6455) connections and their Winsock socket parameters Detect and view Winsock errors, exceptions and calls made by Winsock, Wininet, and sockets API applications View Winsock protocol implementation of the World Wide Web Supported Operating Systems: Windows Vista/2008/7/8/10 License: Shareware TracePlus/Winsock Product Page: TracePlus/Winsock Review by the Wolfire Team Feature List: This review covers a wide range of features, so let's start with the "killer feature" of this application - "interpret conversations between two Winsock applications" - a feature that's totally absent from other toolkits that support Winsock. With this feature, if a pair of Winsock apps are speaking to one another, you can watch their conversation in real-time, or you can simply watch all the Winsock calls being made, to see which Winsock functions were used. All of the Winsock API calls are included - including Wininet and sockets API calls - as well as Winsock error codes. TracePlus displays all the Winsock functions that are being called, and how they are being called, as the conversation proceeds. You can see
